Updates to Third party access

We have updated the 'Third party access' subsection in the 'Reporting' section of all disclosure documents as follows:

Third party access

We may disclose information about you and your account to a third party where we're authorised to do so. What they can do depends on the type of third party and their level of authority:

- An Individual Third Party can be granted secure online access to view information and reports. You may also authorise this individual to provide instructions on your behalf.
- A Professional Third Party can be provided with information and certain reports via secure data feeds or on-request reports.

In the 'Terminology used' section of all disclosure documents, the definition of 'Third Party' is being replaced by two new definitions:

- Individual Third Party - An individual, such as a spouse, family member, or an individual acting under a Power of Attorney, whom you authorise to have secure online access to view information and reports for your account via digital banking. You may also authorise this individual to provide instructions.
- Professional Third Party - A financial services company or professional, such as an accountant, whom you authorise to receive information and reports. Access for a Professional Third Party is provided via secure data feeds or on-request reports and does not include access to digital banking.

Update to eligible investments (excluding Macquarie Investment Accumulator)

We're updating our eligible Australian listed investments to include securities listed on Cboe Australia, in addition to securities listed on the ASX. You can find more information in the relevant Investment Menu when these investments become available.
